MINUTE KNOCKS OUT DANNY M'BRIDE IN SIX ROUNDS.

The Chicago Lad Altogether Too Much for Dan.
In the Preliminary Burke Defeats Tonkins.

By Right Cross.

The White-McBride fight drew a good house to the Greater New York A. C. Coney Island, last night. It was a case of "regulars" - men who watch closely, murmur a bit between the runs as they exchange opinions, grow silent as soon as the bell rings and applaud where the contest deserves it.

The preliminary was interesting and up to the standard. Sam Tonkins, of Astoria, and Joe Burke, of Brooklyn, met at 145 pounds, straight, Burke had his man bleeding a bit from the nose before they had gone three rounds, and had him wandering in the fifth. His speed left him, however, Tonkins came back strong and they went on decently until the tenth. Then Burke started in to finish things. He straightened Tonkins up with left jabs and hooks. Then as he began to use the right he tired and Tonkins got a few rough swings to the head on his own hook.

The next round the wise Burke did little but take wind out of his opponent. The final round, he began by crowding Tonkins. Then, after he drew the lead, "bang" went his left to the head. Tonkins came on and tried many a time to get the body with left and left himself wide open. But Burke took no chances and waited until the opportunity was perfect. Then over went the right and Tonkins staggered wearily. Burke even then was cautious. Then over again with the right, and Tonkins looked bantam. The bell found both men on their feet, but the decision, of course, went to Burke.

Both White and McBride looked in perfect condition. Tommy was seconded by Billy Madden, Harry Peppers and Jimmy Carroll; Danny by Jack Beverland, Jim Quinn, Walter Fisher and Joe Fisher. They met in a bout scheduled for twenty-five rounds at 126 pounds for the championship at that weight. They agreed to break even in the second.

White began with the left without a faint. He stabbed Danny full in the face a dozen times before McBride could get on his feet. Then, as McBride insisted on leaving the hole for the right eye, Tommy put it on him. Mac tried a bit of roughing, but didn't get anything home. White made him look like a very bad boxer.

In the second Danny tried all sorts of blows with the left and was countered after each with the right. McBride, who outreached him, stood him off sent a clinch to save a round like a flash. Danny then began trying the right, but it failed to reach. He coughed and Philadelphia, Oct. 3.—George Davis, shortstop for the Giants, lies dangerously injured at the Good Samaritan Hospital here. He was struck just below the right eye by a foul tip in his afternoon's game and was taken to the hospital in an ambulance. The accident occurred in the first inning. Davis lunged heavily at a fast inshoot, which glanced from his bat and struck him almost full in the face. The missile just missed his right eyeball and landed on the cheek bone.

Davis dropped to the ground insensible. The other players bathed his face with water until Joyce realized the serious nature of the injuries and called a physician. The doctor found that an ambulance was summoned and Davis was borne to the hospital, a few blocks away. An examination revealed the fact that the tendons of the eyeball were badly strained. Had the ball struck a fraction of an inch higher Davis would have lost his sight. The hospital surgeon declared that Davis will not be able to play again this season.

Despite the loss of Davis, the Giants rode roughshod over the Quakers. Seymour was at his best and proved a right fielder. He had the speed of a dynamite gun and kept the Philadelphia at a respectful distance from the plate. The Davis accident made the Quakers timid as horses and they gave a wide berth to "Sis" whizzing shots. Seymour realized this advantage and pitched slowly and accurately. A few badly scattered hits were gleamed from his curves, and only one man reached third base.

In the opening inning drives by Van Doyle and Seymour yielded two runs. Seven rounds later Joyce doubled and Doyle brought home by a timely one-sacker. That was enough to win.
